Views On Dental Health

YOUR SENSITIVITY THRESHOLD

If you are treated for gum disease and some of the roots of your teeth have been exposed, you may experience a temporary sensitivity to heat and cold. Much will depend on your sensitivity threshold and the extent of the treatment needed to restore your teeth and gums to a healthy condition.

Whatever sensitivity you are feeling, however, can probably be reduced or eliminated. For instance, your dentist may apply stannous or sodium fluoride or some other solution to the root surface to eliminate the sensitivity. He may also recommend that you use a special toothpaste, such as Sensodyne, to reduce the sensitivity more rapidly while your gums are healing.

Whatever discomfort you may feel initially, however, is a small price to pay for saving your teeth. Gum disease is a major cause of tooth loss. It should be treated as promptly as possible by your dentist. If you have noticed occasional bleeding when you brush your teeth or any signs of gum discomfort, see your dentist for treatment.
