During this special ceremony on Sept. 11, U.S. Magistrate Judge John W. Primomo will administer the oath of allegiance, as the Exhibit Floor temporarily becomes a federal courtroom.

Whether you have been a citizen your entire life or just a short time, restate your oath and be a part of this day of remembrance and commitment.

The American Association of Museums and the Federal Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) are supporting American museums as they Celebrate America's Freedoms in a Day of Remembrance on September 11.

"Our museums are a reflection of America itself," remarked Dr. Robert Martin, director of IMLS. "They are stewards of the things we create, and the ideas we shape. They tell the nation's stories, and, on Sept. 11, they will stand with their communities as another chapter in our history unfolds.

"Museums offer their communities special places to examine and reaffirm such precious freedoms as the freedom to assemble, to worship, to learn, to express ideas and the freedom from fear."

Views On Dental Health

WHEN YOU'VE LOST A TOOTH

You may think losing one tooth is of no real consequence, until you see the results of the chain reaction that begins to take place. The process is gradual and you may not be aware of what's happened until a serious problem develops.

When you smile broadly, you may not feel any embarrassment if the missing tooth is in the back of your mouth. Perhaps not now, but in time there will be certain facial changes. Your cheek, for example, may slowly start to sink into the space once maintained by the missing tooth. This may cause a sagging, puckering, and wrinkling of the skin, giving your face an older look than your years. Inside, the missing tooth will contribute to the drifting of adjacent teeth, forming pockets where bacteria can thrive. The resulting gum disease, if not treated in time, can lead to decay and tooth loss.

Missing teeth are not to be ignored if you're concerned about your dental health and your appearance. When you have a tooth extracted and your dentist recommends that the missing tooth be replaced with an artificial one, take his advice.
