Gary Allan

Charly McClane in 1989 and Tim McGraw in 1994.

Celebrating their new home at the Colorado County Ag Complex, the fair association brought in a record crowd with Chris LeDoux in 2000, followed by Trace Adkins last year. Allan last appeared at the Colorado County Fair in 1997, before he was a widely recognized entertainer, and is expected to draw similar crowds.

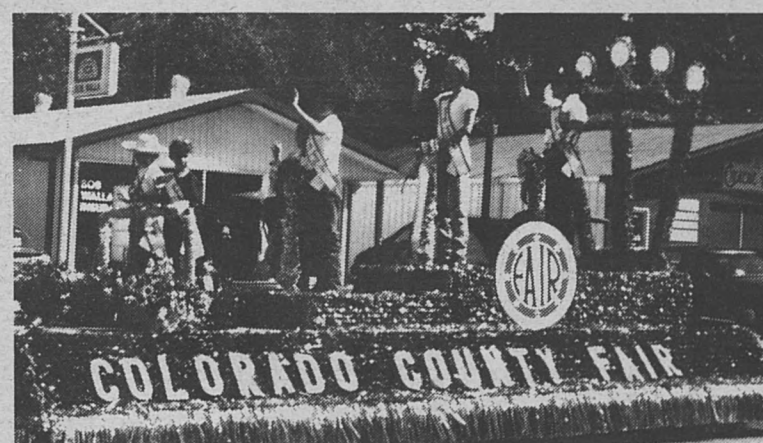

Now a top recording artist along with Lyle Lovett and many other non-traditional country singers under contract with MCA Nashville, Allan is dubbed the "Surfin' Cowboy" by fans and friends alike. A native of Orange County, California, Allan's music has been described as hard-core. From his days as a teenage surf-punk in Southern California to his love of country music greats Merle Haggard and Buck Owens, the designation fits, especially when it comes to his uncompromising attitude.

With Allan's recent climb to #10 on Billboard's Album Chart with his CD "Alright Guy" and his single "The One" which recently topped the charts at #2, Allan has gained national attention for his frank and honest lyrics which have ruffled more than a few feathers in Nashville.

"People come up to me all the time at shows and say they're starving for something honest," Allan said in a MCA Nashville interview. "A lot of the stuff out there now is just fluff. I just lay it all out there."

Allan will perform Saturday evening, September 14 in the Pavilion. Opening for Allan will be Texas Unlimited - billed as the only "live" Texas dance hall band.
