DENTURES THAT "STAY"

If you wished your denture stayed in place better, there's hope. As few as two implants are needed to hold in dentures equipped with precision attachments. Dentists are amazed at how well the implant-attachment-denture stays in place. It could literally change the lifestyle of millions of frustrated denture wearers.

A small incision is made in the gum, then a tiny opening is made into the jawbone into which the implant is inserted. The gum is then sutured into place and things left alone for 4 to 6 months to let the bone heal or "integrate" around the implant.

Precision attachments are then placed in the implant which attach to the denture to provide a very stable, functional denture just like natural teeth.

Presented as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of JOHN B. MYRES, D.D.S., 700 S. McCarty Avenue, Eagle Lake, 234-3525.
