Sense of Taste

As we age, there are a number of changes that can occur which may impair our sense of taste, and our enjoyment of food. Some changes involve a reduction in the number of taste buds in the surface of the tongue. Different diseases, nutritional deficiencies, and certain drugs can affect the sense of taste and smell. Dental problems such as dry mouth, gum disease, and bad breath can affect the sense of taste. Removeable dentures can cause irritation of the mouth that may affect taste, and also create a physical barrier that decreases the tactile enjoyment of food.

The best thing that you can do to combat these taste-reducing changes is to schedule routine dental examinations and a professional cleaning at least twice a year. All dental infections (cavities and gum disease) as well as other dental problems should be treated as soon as possible. To remove coatings that block your taste buds, use a soft bristle brush to brush your tongue at least twice a day. You can improve the taste of foods by using spices, seasonings, and flavoring agents (orange or vanilla), but avoid using sugar or salt.

$1 Million In Housing Grants Announced

Agriculture Deputy Secretary Chuck Conner has announced that USDA Rural Development is seeking applications for $1 million in counseling and technical assistance grants to help rural residents obtain adequate housing and to reduce the level of delinquent payments among borrowers.

"These grants will help community- and faith-based organizations reach out to rural residents in need of safe, affordable housing," Conner said.

"Rural Development helped nearly 43,000 families become homeowners in 2006.

"Programs like the one announced today help rural residents remain in their homes."

Half of the money will be targeted to five states with high levels of rural poverty and standard housing and states that were severely impacted by major natural disasters.

These states are California, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

The remainder of the money will be awarded through a national competition.

No more than one grant per state will be awarded. Non-profit and community organizations are eligible for grants up to $100,000.

The deadline for submitting pre-applications is July 20.

Applications and complete program instructions are available at any Area Office listed on the USDA Rural Development website at www.rurdev.usda.gov.

USDA Rural Development's mission is to increase economic opportunity and improve the quality of life for rural residents.

Rural Development has invested more than $76.8 billion since 2001 for equity and technical assistance to finance and foster growth in homeownership, business development, and critical community and technology infrastructure.

More than 1.5 million jobs have been created or saved through these investments.

Further information on rural programs is available at a local USDA Rural Development office.
