Long-Term Care Advocate Information

The staff and volunteers in the State Long-term Care Ombudsman Program are here for Texans who live in nursing or assisted living facilities.
"These dedicated and compassionate individuals strive to improve the quality of care and lives of Texans by being advocates for residents," said Laura Albrecht, spokesperson for the Texas Department of Aging and Disability Services (DADS).
Through professional staff and certified volunteer ombudsmen, the program advocates for quality of life and care for residents in nursing homes and assisted living facilities.
The program operates through 28 Texas Area Agencies on Aging.

An ombudsman can help nursing or assisted living facility residents with a variety of issues including slow response to call lights, quality of food, cleanliness, medications and staffing issues.
He or she can provide information and assistance, respond to complaints and advocate for system policy changes.
The ombudsman works directly with residents, facility management and family members to resolve issues in a prompt manner that benefits the resident's quality of life and care.
With a network of paid staff and volunteers, the statewide program is available to help more than 90,000 people living in nursing facilities and 30,000 residents of assisted living facilities.

After receiving training, volunteers visit facilities to advocate for quality care and to protect the rights of residents.
Residents and their families can take an active role to make sure their loved one's rights are protected and the quality of life issues are addressed.
A proactive approach can help resolve issues before they become serious problems.
Residents of nursing and assisted living facilities have rights protected under the law.
Residents' rights include:
-Being treated with respect, dignity and consideration.
-Being informed of their medical condition and participating in treatment planning.
-Making complaints and expressing grievances without fear of discrimination or reprisal.

-Managing personal and financial affairs and making choices and independent decisions.
-Issuing advance directives, including directive to physician, medical power or attorney and out-of-hospital do-not resuscitate.
An ombudsman is legally required to preserve a resident's confidentiality.
This means anyone can file a complaint with an ombudsman and be assured that their identity will not be disclosed during an investigation.
For information about the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman program and patient's rights, call (800) 252-2412.
