Halloween Safety Tips

By Texas Department of Health and Human Services

For parents on Halloween night, much of the fun lies in pretending to be terrified by half-pint vampires with sparkly pink hair clips and chocolate-stained hands.

But when your own kids are out trick or treating, the make-believe terrors of Halloween can turn real in a hurry, unless you've taught your young goblins and wizards how to safely enjoy their night of sugar-fueled adventure.

You can start by sharing the following advice from the Texas Department of State Health Services.

For kids:

Trick or treat only at houses you're familiar with and only when the porch light is on.

Look both ways before crossing streets and cross only at corners.

Never step into the street from between parked cars, trees or other large objects that might prevent drivers from seeing you.

Stay away from pets you don't know.

Halloween activity can frighten even the gentlest animal and they may feel threatened by costumes.

Stay on sidewalks whenever possible.

If there's no sidewalk, stick close to the left side of the road facing traffic.

Before leaving, check your flashlight to make sure the batteries are fresh.

Never accept rides or treats from someone in a car or truck.

Choose costumes that glow in the dark, or add reflective tape or paint so you can be seen at night.

If your costume's mask blocks your vision in any direction, use face paint instead.

Choose a costume that's short enough to reduce the risk of tripping.

Some costumes may be flammable, so stay away from lighted candles, lanterns or other sources of flame.

Don't eat any Halloween treats until an adult has checked them for adults:

Keep jack o' lanterns and candles away from anything that could catch fire, including costumes and decorations made of paper, cardboard or plastic.

Clear your yard of potentially dangerous or breakable items such as ladders, toys or tools.

Don't let children under 12 go out alone.

They should be accompanied by buddies and, preferably, an adult.

Know the route your trick-or-treaters are planning to take.

Wear a costume if it helps you get in the Halloween spirit, but remove your mask while driving.

If your kids' costumes feature items such as knives, swords or light sabers, make sure they're soft and flexible.

If you're driving trick-or-treaters around the neighborhood, make sure they enter and exit the car on the side away from traffic.

And, of course, be aware of time and give all your trick-or-treaters a non-negotiable deadline for getting home.

Unlike some years, no adjustment will be needed this Halloween for Daylight Saving Time, which ends on Nov. 2.

But even with an extra hour of daylight it's a good idea to limit the amount of time that children are out after dark.

For kids everywhere, and many grownups as well, Halloween is one of the most anticipated times of the year.

Following these suggestions can help make it a night in which your only real fear is running out of candy before the doorbell stops ringing.
