WCJC Employees Celebrate 50 Years

Just listening to Gene Bahnsen and Jim Carolan as they spend time together, it's obvious their friendship has weathered the test of time. And it has.

Both started working at Wharton County Junior College (WCJC) in the summer of 1959 - Bahnsen in July and Carolan in August. Back then President John Hodges handled the hiring.

Since that time they've worked under five other presidents and now teach the third generation of students from families in the college's service area. And they've seen a lot of changes.

Bahnsen - fresh off a three-year tour of duty in the United States Air Force and working in West Texas to make ends meet - hired on as the college's head basketball coach, assistant football coach, physical education instructor and dorm director for the brand new Frankie Hall athletic dorm.

At that time WCJC had a football field, which has since given way to the Duson-Hansen Fine Arts Building.

Carolan, having just received his master's degree, was hired on the spot by Hodges to join the WCJC faculty.

He considers today's math students technologically well-prepared. "They're both computer and scientific-calculator literate, so this makes it easier to teach them. The students are a tribute to their pre-WCJC educators."

The technological advances don't seem to faze Carolan who says professional development has helped him keep pace and enabled him to "teach more students and teach them at a faster pace." Bahnsen, who has served as WCJC athletic director since 1965 and still teaches kinesiology, points to the college "annuals" and how students in the 1960s dressed up for their yearbook photos.
