Wildfire

dense woods.

Also, back fires were set in an attempt to contain the blaze.

After initial success Saturday in containing the blaze, on Sunday winds whipped flames over fire-breaks, causing requests for fire units to return to the scene.

"It calms down at night, but in the day, the wind and lower humidity whip it back up," one fire fighter said.

Four fire fighters were treated for heat exhaustion Saturday and Sunday as they worked in 100-degree temperatures and another fire fighter suffered a burn when he accidentally touched an exhaust on a piece of equipment.

The Salvation Army and Red Cross set up operations to provide food and water for exhausted fire fighters.

There was also a huge out-pouring of food and drinks from private citizens, for which fire officials said they were extremely grateful.

Among the fire departments sending units and manpower were Columbus, Weimar, Frelsburg, Bernardo, Eagle Lake, Rock Island, Sheridan, Cat Spring, New Ulm, Sealy and Bellville.
