Airbag Safety For Children

Air bags can save lives -- there's little doubt about it. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) estimates that air bags have saved more than 20,000 lives as of 2006. However, the flip side of air bags is their inherent danger.

Air bags have killed 264 people since the NHTSA began keeping a record of the injuries and deaths associated with these safety devices.

Many experts also warn that air bags and young children simply do not mix. Therefore it is important for drivers to know how to safeguard against injuries when there are child passengers onboard.

The American Academy of Pediatrics and the NHTSA offer safety guidelines for young passengers. Here are some of their important tips:

* The safest place for all infants and children younger than 13 to ride is in the back seat.

* If an infant must ride in the front it should not be where an air bag is equipped. (Note: It is not recommended that infants ride in the front seat.)

* All children should be properly secured in car safety seats, belt-positioning booster seats, or the shoulder/lap belts correct for their size.

* Side air bags improve safety for adults in side impact crashes, but children who are not properly restrained and are seated near a side air bag may be at risk for serious injury.
Check your vehicle owner's manual to see what it says about children and side air bags.
* "Advanced air bags" make travel safer for adults, but it is not yet known how they will impact the safety of children.
Even though these new air bags may be safer, the back seat is still the safest place for children younger than 13 to ride.

* Don't travel with more children in the car than can safely be buckled into the back seat.
* Air bag on/off switches should only be used if your pediatrician advises due to a specific health condition.
For more information on air bag safety and child passengers, contact your vehicle manufacturer or the NHTSA.
Many fire or police stations will also instruct parents on the proper installation of car seats and booster seats for safety.

Farm Bureau Talks About Nov. Election

November's constitutional amendment election on House Joint Resolution 14 will be an important vote for Texans interested in protecting their private property rights.

"It will be important that we all let our voice be heard on this issue," said Mary Ulbricht, Colorado County Farm Bureau President. "Our organization has fought for years to bring about reforms to the state's flawed eminent domain laws. HJR 14 will be a good first step to achieving that goal."

HJR 14 ratifies a 2005 Legislature passed in the law the special session which limits the taking of private property by the use of eminent domain. While an important protection for Texas property owners, President Ulbricht said more will need to be accomplished before eminent domain is truly reformed in the Lone Star State.

"We had an important piece of legislation in Senate Bill 18 that was approved unanimously by the Senate and the members of the House Land and Resource Management Committee," President Ulbricht said. "Unfortunately, SB 18 along with several other pieces of good legislation, died in the final days of the Legislature's general session in an unrelated political fight over voter identification."

SB 18 offered several protections for private property owners, including compensation to landowners for lost access to their property, values that represent fair market value and the right to repurchase land not used for the condemning purpose.

Framing a similar piece of legislation at the next earliest opportunity will be key to any true reform, Ulbricht said.

"Until we have the opportunity again, we need to let our lawmakers know unquestionably that this issue is important to all of us in the Lone Star State when we have the chance to head to the polls in November," he said.
