Did You Know? Bowl Games

Each year, hundreds of thousands of college football fans gather on the first of January to watch their favorite teams play their bowl game. Impress your friends and family with some college football bowl game tidbits. The first bowl game was played in January of 1902 at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California. One of the game's most historic bowl games, the Orange Bowl, got its start on January 1, 1935. Bucknell beat the University of Miami 26-0. From 1946-1949, the Raisin Bowl pitted a California school against an at-large team. San Jose State University twice won the bowl. The Rose Bowl is affectionately nicknamed "The Grand-daddy of 'Em All." In 1998, the controversial Bowl Championship Series (BCS) was instituted to determine the national champion. The only year in which the Sugar Bowl was not played in New Orleans was 2006, when the game was moved to the Georgia Dome in Atlanta after the Superdome suffered extensive damage resulting from Hurricane Katrina. In 1947, rivals Louisiana State University (LSU) and the University of Arkansas met in the Cotton Bowl, a game that ended in a scoreless tie. The original name for the Rose Bowl was the "Tournament East-West Football Game" and was started to feature the best college football team from the east against the best college football team from the west.
